

Diogo Paiva is currently a PhD student on Modern and Contemporary History (Iscte-IUL - Lisbon). He holds a BA in History and Archaeology (2005) and a MA in Ancient History (2012), both in NOVA University Lisbon.

After graduating, he spent several years working in archaeological projects and in construction works monitoring. In parallel, he also worked as a teacher in professional education and in adult training courses.

Since 2011, he worked as a research assistant in research projects at CHAM-NOVA FCSH, in different fields ranging from Ancient Near Eastern History & Archaeology to Historical Demography and Modern Colonial Populations, being responsible for historical database design, archival research and demographic analysis of colonial populations. From 2016 to 2019 he worked at IISH (Amsterdam) as an Early-Stage Researcher in the Marie Skłodowska-Curie project LONGPOP, focusing on historical data linkage techniques and geocoding historical addresses of 19th-20th centuries Dutch and Antwerpian populations.

In 2019, he becomes a FCT PhD grant holder and is developing his doctoral research on Portuguese convict populations in Degredo during the 19th century, under the supervision of Paulo Teodoro de Matos.
